

Historical sewing machine manufactured by the Singer Manufacturing Company (SIMANCO) in Great Britain (now UK) circa 1903.

It is believed that the sewing machine was used in the former Sewing Room (now Building 'K') for sewing garments and other sundry items. The Sewing Room was originally designed as a female bath house and converted, in 1941, into a room for seamstresses.

